

Help Us Ban Cluster Bombs

Cluster munitions:

- are on the ground in more than 20 countries
- are in the arsenals of over 70 nations, as well as non-state armed groups
- indiscriminately kill and injure civilians
- scatter explosives over a wide area
- often fail to explode on impact, and
- continue to kill and injure men, women and children long after conflict ends.

While around the world a number of governments and organisations are working to develop international laws that outlaw these devastating weapons, we understand that the Australian government had bought a new artillery shell that many experts say is a “cluster”.

Join the effort to make the world a safer place, go to:

www.austcare.org.au

and find out more about the issue.

Help Us Ban Cluster Bombs

Cluster munitions:

- are on the ground in more than 20 countries
- are in the arsenals of over 70 nations, as well as non-state armed groups
- indiscriminately kill and injure civilians
- scatter explosives over a wide area
- often fail to explode on impact, and
- continue to kill and injure men, women and children long after conflict ends.

While around the world a number of governments and organisations are working to develop international laws that outlaw these devastating weapons, we understand that the Australian government had bought a new artillery shell that many experts say is a “cluster”.

Join the effort to make the world a safer place, go to:

www.austcare.org.au

and find out more about the issue.